JUNIOR RED CROSS WORK

THE action of the state educational conference in regulating the application of economies in school work will meet with the approval of every parent and taxpayer when it is understood that classes in domestic economy and manual training are to be concentrated on war work instead of frittering away the time of the boys and girls on pretty nothings that are of no practical account except for hanging on the wall as samples of what cleverly applied child talent can do. Both these branches of school work are to be co-ordinated with other necessary war activities which will not only enlist the interest of the pupils but will stimulate their patriotism. The action of the Carson City conference was not generally understood when presented in skeleton form but the resolutions in full leave nothing to be desired. This work has been done by the pupils of Tonopah high school for over a year but it has been done in their own time after they had spent the various class periods and completed a full day's study. Under the new arrangement the work will be more effective and pleasing since it will not be a hardship or involve extra labor which, it must be said, was cheerfully given. However, this labor often forced parents to relieve their boys and girls from certain domestic duties and therefore trespassed on the life of the home which should not have been disturbed by the class work. The resolutions set forth the objects sought to be attained in the following comprehensive manner:

Whereas, It is desirable that Junior Red Cross work be promoted and given every encouragement in the schools of Nevada; and whereas, certain difficulties have been encountered by the national officers of the American Red Cross in evolving a basic plan suitable for all; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this conference that the state board of education should empower the school authorities of the state to substitute Red Cross work for regular work as laid down in the high school and elementary courses of study for manual training and domestic science whenever desired; and, be it further

Resolved, That the program for Junior Red Cross work in Nevada be held in abeyance until receipt of the plan devised by national officers of the American Red Cross, and that such plan be modified by the proper authorities to meet Nevada conditions wherever necessary.

NEVADA IN WAR WORK

THE eleventh hour entry of Nevada into the field as a candidate for recognition in securing an appropriation from the government for the opening of a reconstruction hospital in this state should not prevent men of affairs from taking an active part in using their best efforts to secure the coveted recognition. The action of Mrs. Nixon in donating her magnificent home in Reno with their spacious grounds to war uses furnishes an excellent fulcrum for pressing the issue. The war department has explained that the present exigencies are too urgent to permit the construction of special buildings for the accommodation of patients but, where suitable facilities are found and offered free of charge, the government will give first consideration with a view to adapting them to rehabilitation hospitals. This is the time to act quickly and the issue should be pressed without any further ado. Nevada has the climate combining both altitude and sunshine which are 90 per cent of the game in restoring health. Restful environment is one of the principal factors in restoring nervous wrecks to useful citizenship. A noted surgeon and psychopathic physician in writing of the hospital condition as he has observed them in France states the case in the following brief summary:

"Uncle Sam is sending his boys into a furnace the like of which was never seen before and which one cannot sense until he has been within the sound of the great guns. It breaks the strongest nerve after a while. The weaker ones succumb right away. We came in the nick of time. We will finish the war and in so doing make a grievous number of wrecks of men not only in body but in mind and nerve. We will have many scores of thousands to help back to health. It can be done in a majority of cases. These men who suffer in their nervous systems are very susceptible to their surroundings. Especially do noises bother them, also climatic conditions such as bad weather. A thunderstorm will undo the work of weeks sometimes. The beating of a drum in a band makes the music unbearable even to a man who is very fond of music."

THE SERVICE OF CRITICISM

NO man can be a true and loyal supporter of the administration if he opposes free and fair criticism of the administration's mistakes. Much less can such a one be a true and loyal supporter of the government. President Wilson himself said: "While exercising the great powers of the office I hold, I would regret in the crisis like the one through which we are now passing to lose the benefit of patriotic and intelligent criticism." Assuming that the president meant what he said, no person can be a loyal supporter of the president and take a different view. But in this or any other crisis, the first consideration is not support of the president, but support of the government. Mr. Asquith, the British statesman, recognized this when he said: "There is no reason, there was never less reason, why the voice of honest and patriotic criticism should be hushed into silence."

There is not now and there never has been any serious danger of injury to the country from criticisms voiced by the country's enemies. Criticisms coming from an enemy carry with them a note of disloyalty which the people of the country will be quick to detect. On the other hand, there has been and will yet be much good accomplished by criticisms voiced by the country's friends. And there will be little difficulty in determining whether the critic be a friend or an enemy. The doughty colonel who was refused a chance to go into the trenches and whose four sons went to the firing line, one of them to lose his life, has been one of the most persistent and most vigorous of the administration's critics, but one whose loyalty to the government no one has ever questioned. There are thousands of others; in and out of congress, who have pointed out the shortcomings of the administration, with the result that faults have been remedied with great good to the allied cause.

Austria is showing the marble heart since her ally, the kaiser, began getting what was coming to him.

Even Turkey has lost respect for the tottering throne of the Hohenzollerns and is nibbling around for a chance to make a separate peace.

ARMY MOTOR TRUCKS OF EVERY ORDER

(Correspondence Associated Press)

AN AMERICAN PORT, Western France, August 29.—There are all kinds of armies these war days, and today we saw an army of automobiles drawn up in brigades and regiments, every conceivable kind of motor vehicle for carrying on the many war activities. These were ammunition cars, tank cars for carrying gasoline, steel trucks for the wounded, ambulance cars for the wounded, signal service cars with complete wireless outfit and all the equipment for field signalling, reconnaissance cars on which 18 men make a reconnaissance into enemy country, battalion after battalion of touring cars for headquarters and other branches of the service, and motorcycles for the dispatch bearers. It was like half a dozen big automobile expositions rolled into one, and all devoted to the one business of carrying on the war.

The commandment led the way through Wilson avenue of the huge plant, and then turned into Roosevelt avenue. On one side stretched away a half mile square of motor vehicles in such a vast array as to be fairly bewildering, but all lined up in regular formation like soldiers ready to move forward to the front. On the other side stretched away acre after acre of buildings for the innumerable branches of this work, and between them on the open spaces armies of soldiers in overalls sitting up all kinds of motor cars. Everywhere were stacked the masses of "knock-down" parts just arrived from the United States; mountains of wheels and sides, motors, batteries, radiators, and block after block of huge crates containing the big chassis of the many types of war cars.

As the commandant passed along he summoned up the magnitude of the work. Sixty-two complete trucks and cars have been turned out in one day. This is the record at the start, with a monthly output of 1200 cars and 500 motorcycles and a much greater production when the organization gets under way. In theory, these are all standard parts which need only to be fitted together, an easy task apparently as most of the preliminary construction is done in the factories of America. But in fact, so say those who do the work, these parts do not fit; they have to be shaped and fitted after arrival. Then there are many factories sending many kinds of parts. Some factories send complete equipment, such as bolts and the heavy wooden shells for trucks. But other factories do not send the bolts or shells.

A long line of ovens was passed in which we saw some of the delicate parts of the mechanism being baked and dried to cure them from the dampness of the sea journey. The sea air plays many tricks on these parts. We saw the field windings of generators covered with sea rust and green mould. All of these

BRITISH GOVERNMENT PENSION ALLOWANCE

(By Associated Press)
 LONDON, Sept. 3.—A new scale of separation allowances for soldiers, sailors and airmen just issued, will, it is estimated, cost £23,000,000 yearly. The increased allowances are in respect of children under fourteen years old and for motherless children who are being maintained in homes.

other centers of American production.

The artillery cars with special equipment of range finders, telescopes, wireless, etc., and reconnaissance cars looking like big sight-seeing brakes, are also being turned out in large number, as these and the signal corps cars are most needed with the fighting on. As the many types of cars are finished, they go into the great open park to join the huge assembling of cars of all kinds ready to move forward to the front. It is an endless procession, with one steady stream of cars coming from the shops, and another moving off to the battle line.

And besides the magnitude of this war work which has suddenly sprung into existence, there is the eager spirit of a great industrial community which takes as much pride in its part in the war work as the men along the front lines.
